

Between two generations

Over the years, there have been different societies, and generation after generation emerges from each society. With each new generation, differences appear, and these differences may or may not be accepted by previous generations. These differences varied, especially in the way of life, the nature of the circumstances or the surrounding environment, and the needs or goals.

One of the main differences is the different nature of life between the old and the new generation. For as long as the ancient generations lived in a world inhabited by calm and great stability due to the lack of variables and the closure of societies on each other, and all these generations had their own environment and societies, in which their lifestyle was close and did not show fundamental changes in it. While generations now live in a world full of variables and instability, especially with the beginning of the twenty-first century, where the different societies of the world were able to communicate with each other because of the great spread of the Internet in various environments and the emergence of communication sites, and this led to the cross-pollination of ideas and to major changes in the level of ideas and interests

There is another difference between ancient and modern lifestyle. The old generations had a simple, uncomplicated lifestyle like any simple human life represented in the basic activities of going to work or practicing craft and to reading the newspaper or watching TV to follow the news and perhaps visiting relatives or friends and then repeating the same routine daily. As for now, the lifestyle has become complicated, as the interests and temptations have increased due to the great openness of the world, in addition to the great influence of advertisements on defining interests, and there are great needs and goals that this generation wants to obtain or achieve.

The third difference is in the demands of different generations from each other. The old generation of the new generation needs to preserve the heritage of their ancestors and the values on which they were brought up, to be obedient, and to follow their example, because they are the most experienced . On the other hand, the modern generation needs to be more free and to get rid of the habits that have always shackled them and did not allow them to progress or rise and change, in addition to providing them with their needs and demands, which increase every day from the other because of the large number of temptations that they are affected by because of the advertisements and the variables around them, and this is not within the power of the generation old most of the time.

In conclusion, I believe that the modern generation is able to change the old generations because of its strong insistence on its demands and its great and different ability to persuade, but the question here is whether the old generation will be able to find a way that allows the new generation to engage in the new world and coexist with it with all its variables, provided that they do not melt into it and give up on his basic values and assets. ?